BLACK'S MEDICAL DICTIONARY

EDITED BY

JOHN D. COMRIE, M.A., B.Sc., M.D., F.R.C.P.Edin.

Sixth Edition, completing 40,000 copies. Demy 8*vo. Cloth. Containing* 12 full-page Illustrations in Colour, and 431 Illustrations in Black and White in the Text, etc.

PRICE 12/6 NET

(By post, 13s.)

A VERY USEFUL AND CLEARLY-WRITTEN VOLUME, WHICH, WHILE CAREFULLY AVOIDING ABSTRUSE AND INTRICATE TECHNICALITIES, AFFORDS INFORMATION UPON ALL IMPORTANT MEDICAL SUBJECTS IN A FORM WHICH PLACES IT WITHIN THE COMPREHENSION OF THOSE WHO LACK SCIENTIFIC TRAINING AND SCIENTIFIC KNOWLEDGE.

Some Press Opinions

"This is a book which would prove useful from time to time in any household, and is, moreover, so well written—its prime merit that of clearness—as to furnish reading of an interesting character quite apart from the idea of turning the information to immediate use."—Guardian.

"The book should be of great service to such classes as ship captains, nurses, and those in the country who live some distance from a doctor."—Liverpool Courier.

"No one could read it through without acquiring a large amount of sound information, not only in regard to the organs of the human body, their functions, and the diseases to which they are liable, but also a good deal of learning in regard to such important matters as clothing, diet, exercise, sanitation, and ventilation. It is a thoroughly practical, useful book, singularly complete."—Scotsman.

"Medical terms are arranged and explained in alphabetical order, and the details given are so practical and clearly put that it is a book we would strongly recommend to nurses. By having this book in the house the nurse need not be obliged to write to busy journals on simple medical matters, but in addition to finding the answer to occasional queries, we can confidently say that nurses will find this an admirable text-book for occasional study. . . ."—Nursing Times.

It covers the whole scope of those special affairs of the home which a British wife and mother delights in directing, retaining as its groundwork whatever remains of present-day value from the old homely habits and customs which have served our race so well in the past.

It imports into its survey such tested and proved new ideas in home economies and efficiency as have been forced upon us by altered conditions, and deals with the mechanism and science of the home, particularly in culinary matters, with a due recognition of the improvements which latter-day invention has placed at the command of the housewife.

It steers clear of extravagance, recommending only what is necessary and sufficient in all cases. Thus it makes for economy at every turn.

It is simplicity itself in arrangement, which is strictly alphabetical, with cross references linking up leading subjects with their kindred supplementaries. It is as easily consulted as it is easily understood.

PREFACE

THE annual volumes of Who's Who are confined to those still living. But it has long been felt that it is not the biographies of the living only that are required.

To learn details of the career of a distinguished man recently dead, it has so far been necessary to look him up in a back volume of Who's Who. This entailed on the busy journalist, or man of affairs, the necessity for keeping the whole of the past volumes on his shelves. To obviate this the biographies of all those who died between 1897 and 1916 (the first twenty years of the new issue of Who's Who) have now been re-edited and collected into the present volume, which forms a companion book to the older one, and will probably prove as indispensable.

It had been the intention of the Publishers to bring this volume out in 1916, but difficulties arising out of the war unfortunately rendered that impossible.

24 Sept. 1919.

BARNICOAT, John Wallis; occupying and cultivating freehold farm, Waimea, Nelson; b. Falmouth, England, 3 June 1814; m. 1849. Educ.: Falmouth Proprietary School. Followed profession of surveyor and civil engineer in England, till 1841; arrived in New Zealand, 1842; engaged immediately surveying districts afterwards known as Waimea East and Stoke, and divided them into allotments of 50 acres to the number of 220, thus enabling the land purchasers from the New Zealand Company to occupy their lands hitherto unallotted; then in connection with his partner, Mr. Thompson, similarly surveyed and subdivided 10,000 acres of the Moutere forest and valley; then occupied in various surveys till 1843, when they undertook a survey at the Wairau, where two other survey parties were similarly engaged; these operations were attended by the most deplorable results; the natives had all along declared their determination to prevent the survey and occupation of the Wairau lands by the settlers, and they had obstructed and removed two of the three survey parties; his party being strong, and the survey being smaller than the others, it was finished at the time of the Maori obstructionist arrival at the Wairau, and his party had returned to Nelson, all except himself, who remained, and accompanied the magistrate and armed party who came from Nelson to enforce possession of the land in dispute; the party opposing the Maories numbered 48 in all—24 of whom lost their lives in the attack and subsequent massacre; in 1844 he occupied and cultivated his land on the Waimea swamp, which soon became a fertile farm; during a portion of 1844 was engaged with Mr. Tuckett, chief surveyor of the New Zealand Company, in exploring the middle island in search of a suitable site for the Church of Scotland settlement, which resulted in the selection of Otago; when the Constitution Act came into operation with its six Local Parliaments, he became a member of the Provincial Council of Nelson, and continued his membership during the 22 years of provincialism, being its Speaker throughout, except in the first session; at the same time took a full share in connection with the several local bodies, whether Road Boards, Land Board, School Committee, Education Board, or Board of College Governors, and was a member of the successive Synods of the Church of England. Member Legislative Council, New Zealand, 1883-1904. [Died Feb. 1905.

BOOTH, Rev. William, D.C.L. Oxon.; General and Commander-in-Chief of Salvation Army and director of its social institutions for destitute, vicious, and criminal classes; formerly Minister of the New Connection Church; b. Nottingham, 10 April 1829; o. s. of a builder; m. 1855, Catherine Mumford (d. 1890); three s. four d. Educ.: Nottingham, by a private theological tutor of the Methodist New Connection Church, London. Converted at 15; commenced immediately to preach in the open air in Nottingham. Entered ministry 1852. After being travelling evangelist, appointed by the Conference of Methodist New Connection Church, was required to settle to their ordinary Circuit work. To this he submitted for some years, but eventually, in 1861, resigned in order to again give himself to evangelistic labour. While travelling through the country he came to London and was struck by the destitute condition of the eastern portion of its population, and commenced, on the 5th of July 1865, special efforts on their behalf. This effort was at first styled the Christian Mission, but developed in 1878 into the Salvation Army, which has grown until it had (in 1912) 8972 corps, circles, and societies, established in 56 countries and colonies, with about 21,203 officers and employees, i.e. men and women maintained for the work. In connection with this he organised a great system for the benefit of the submerged, starving, vicious, and criminal classes, which had (in 1912) over 900 social institutions. Beds supplied during twelve months, 6,327,249; meals during same period, 11,839,437. He was the author of Orders and Regulations for Officers and Soldiers; Letters to my Soldiers; Religion for Every Day; Salvation Soldiery Visions; In Darkest England and the Way Out (propounding General Booth's scheme for the abolition of the pauper and dangerous classes of England); and numerous other books and pamphlets. Publications: newspapers entitled War Cry, Young Soldier, Social Gazette, and Bandsman and Songster, with a joint weekly circulation of nearly a million copies in 21 languages; Monthlies with a circulation of 140,000; Musical Monthlies for use of Army's musicians. All the profits of publications go to support Army's various operations. Recreations: none, unless he be said to have found recreation travelling, although he worked as hard at sea as he did in other forms when on land. He five times visited United States and Canada, three times Australasia and South Africa, twice India, once Japan, and several times almost every country in Europe. Address: 101 Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

CARLOS, Don, Duke of Madrid; b. Laibach, 30 March 1848; m. 1st, 1867, Marguerite (d. 1893), Princess of Bourbon-Parma; 2nd, 1894, Marie Berthe, Princess de Rohan. Don Carlos, grand-nephew of Ferdinand VII., claimed the Crown of Spain on the ground that Isabella, d. of Ferdinand VII. and Christina, and mother of Alfonso XII., owing to the Salic law, was debarred from the succession. Like his grandfather and uncle, who as Charles V. and Charles VI. fought for their rights (the former during 7 and the latter during 3 years), Don Carlos took up arms, in 1872, and reigned as Charles VII. over the greater part of Northern Spain until 1876, when, being surrounded by the forces of Alfonso XII., who had recently been proclaimed King at Madrid, he retired into France. As the undisputed senior heir male of the House of Bourbon, Don Carlos would have a distinct right to the throne of France in the event of a monarchical restoration, but though frequently invited by the royalists of that country to put forward his claim, he always abstained from doing so. Heir: Don Jaime, b. 1870, an officer in the Russian Army. Address: Palazzo Loredan, Venice. DIDON, (le très Révérend Père Henri) de l'Ordre des Frères Prêcheurs; Prédicateur Général; Ancien Prieur de Paris; Prieur des Dominicains du collège Albert-le-Grand d'Arcueil; Administrateur Délégué du Conseil d'Administration de la Société Anonyme Albert-le-Grand; Directeur en Chef des écoles Dominicaines d'Arcueil et de Paris; né au Touvet (Isère) le 17 mars, 1840, fils de Mr. R. Didon, et de Mme. Euphrazie Guillaudin. Educ.: Collège Libre du Rondeau près Grenoble, où il parcourut le cycle des Etudes Classiques, sous la direction des prêtres du Diocèse de Grenoble. Lecteur au Docteur en Philosophie et en Théologie; membre de la Commission Supérieure pour l'Education Physique de la Jeunesse (Ministère de l'Instruction Publique); Membre du Comité d'admission pour l'Exposition Universelle de 1900 (enseignement secondaire); Vice-Président. Entré, en Octobre 1856, dans l'Ordre Dominicain, sous la direction du Père Lacordaire. Ses études de philosophie et de théologie achevées à Rome, il professa la philosophie, l'écriture sainte et la théologie, de l'année 1862 à l'année 1865, puis se donna tout entier à la prédication qu'il ne devait abandonner que pour se livrer à l'étude des hautes questions pédagogiques; toutes les grandes villes de France et même de l'étranger l'entendirent même après qu'il se fut fixé à Paris. Après 1880, sollicité par la haute figure de N.S. Jesus-Christ, il entreprit des études spéciales qui durèrent dix ans le conduisirent plusieurs fois en Palestine et aboutirent à son œuvre capitale "Jésus-Christ." C'est en 1890 que répondant à l'appel de ses confrères du Collège d'Arcueil, il consentit à prendre la direction de cet établissement fondé en 1863, par le Père Captier. Il en fut, comme le second fondateur, réorganisant tous les services, suivant des vues plus modernes, ajoutant à la propriété primitive un vaste parc, avec des pelouses destinées spécialement aux Sports Athlétiques, et donnant enfin à l'Ecole Albert-le-Grand son complément nécessaire par la fondation des deux écoles préparatoires Lacordaire et Laplace. Cette dernière école, fondée en 1892, est comme la succursale de l'école Albert-le-Grand, dont elle est voisine. L'école Lacordaire, située à Paris, a été fondée en 1890, pour préparer directement aux plus grandes écoles de l'Etat français. C'est également en 1890 que le P. Didon a crée à Paris un grand externat sous le nom d'Ecole St. Dominique. Publications: L'Homme selon la Science et la foi; La Science sans Dieu; L'Enseignement Supérieur; Les Allemands; Jésus-Christ; L'Union des Catholiques de l'Eglise de France; Indissolubilité et divorce; La Foi en la divinité de Jésus-Christ; L'Education présente; Deux Problèmes Religieux; Un grand nombre de discours détachés, qui n'ont pas encore été réunis en volumes. Recreations: La marche à pied; la gymnastique de chambre; le spectacle des sports athlétiques. Address: à Paris, Ecole Lacordaire, 35 rue St. Didier; à Arcueil (Seine), école Albert-le-Grand. Club: Stade français (Vice-President).
